RICHMOND MAY GET THE REUNION

United Confederate Veterans Likely to be Invited Here Next Year.

UNVEIL DAVIS MONUMENT

ter vb. Two Events Come Together Great Crowd Will be in Attendance.

There seems to be a pretty fair prospect that the annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans may be held here in 1906, and if Richmond shall be able to capture the honor, every effort will be made to complete the prop Jefferson Davis monument, so that it may be unvelled at that time, The next reunion will be held in Louis-ville, next summer and the Virginia members and camps will likely make a hard fight to have the next one held here.

While the matter has taken no definite shape as yet, and nothing has been done looking to securing the meeting for this city, it is argued that as the ranks of the old heroes are thinning out, there should old heroes are thinning out, there should be an early reunion here on the ground where were the capital and headquarters of the Confederacy, and those who favor the proposition say it would be eminently fitting that the monument to the distinguished president and leader should be unveiled to the world at that time.

City Gave Site. City Gave Site.

Matters are fast getting in shape for the work on the monument and those who are pushing it believe that it may be easily completed by 1006. The city has contributed the site for the Davis monument in Lee District and has appropriated the funds necessary for building the contributer and the superpriated the funds necessary for build-ing the foundation. YOUNG WRESTLERS FIGHT

Washerwoman Under Arrest for Failing to Return the Week's Wash.

Manchester Bureau, Times-Dispatch, No. 1112 Hull Street. Officer Waymack yesterday arrested George Miller, the advertising agent of George Miller, the advertising agent of the "Busy Izzy" company, charging him with distributing hangers and lithographs of the show in Manchester without a license. The bills had been placed in a number of public places throughout the city, and the contention is that a permit must first be had. The case will be heard by the Mayor this morning.

Statement About Candidacy.

Policeman Wyatt said last night he was in no position to make known his intentions concerning his candidacy for the position of High Constable, as he had received no official notice of the action of the board in reference to the matter.

"You may rest assured that I shall not talk politics while on duty," he said. "My mind was made up, ilmost, some time ago, but it is not my desire or intention to disregard any rule the board may promulgate. I have not talked with my friends since the board acted, and am not, as I said, in a position to say just what my actions may be."

A friend of Mr. Wyatt's said yestorday that it was entirely probable that the latter would be a candidate against Mr. Garrison, as the question had been practically settled some time ago, and the field had been earefully looked over.

The ruling of the board prohibits an officer engaging in politics in any respect. Buckroe Beach Hostelry.

Ordinance Committee Adopts Tentative Lines for Annexation.

PUBLIC MEETING TO BE HELD

Chamber of Commerce to Discuss Proposition, Then Committee Will Hear Citizens.

It begins to look very much as if the Guncil will shortly adopt an ordinance materially enlarging the corporate linits of the city, the first tangible step along this line having been taken by the Ordinance Committee last night, when a tentative plan was adopted contemplating extension on the northern, eastern and western boundaries. The custom and western lines caused no fight, nor did the northern, indeed, after it had been redurated by the city attorney and city engineer.

drafted by the city attorney and city engineer.

Mr. Minor, however, served notice that he expected, at the next meeting, to offer an amendment, extending the latter so as to include Barton Heights. Alberta Gallatin and her company, with Charles B. Dillingham's original Madison Square Theatre production of "A Clean State," will appear at the Academy to-night, presenting the comedy as originally seen on Broadway and at the Criterion Theatre, London.

The New York Heroid in reviewing the premier performance says: "It is a, pleasure to record the absolute success of so clean and bright a play." Miss Gallatin's charming personality.

clean and bright a play."
Miss Galhatin's charming personality should prove a powerful factor in portraying the delightful role of "Mrs. Tracy Auberion"—whose kusband, a cad in the play, has boiled with another man's wife—who, in reality is overloyed at the other party's discomiture and at having a bad bargain taken off her hands. She afterwards marries an old sweetheart of her romantic girlhood days and is thereby enabled to start life over again with "A Clean Elaic."

Major's novel will wish to see Miss Galland as the impetuous, self-willed Dorothy. Those who are femiliar with the deserted halls, stately apartments and grass-grown terraces of the Haddon Hall of to-day will revel in the beauties of the grand old baronial mansion as it was three hundred years ago, peopled with royal and noble personagos, and making a harmonious background for a story of exceptional interest. Miss Galland will be supported by a company of unusual excellence.

To New York for a Tooth.
Miss Katherine Miller, who plays the "heavy" in "His Last Dollar," has gone to New York to have a broken tooth mended, and while she is away on this most important business Mir. Reynolds is playing her part, and doing so exceptionally well. Miss Miller, soon after her arrival here, broke one of her teeth, and she only romained long enough after the accident to play her part at the opening performance. Few, outside of the company, know the reason of the absence of the actress, but the cause of her hurrled departure is as related. Miss Miller couldn't smile with any satisfaction with the edge proten off of her eye tooth. An actress will go to any extreme to preserve her bearing and the extreme in this case meant New York.
